coasts of Ireland to refuse submarine hunting warships and airplanes.

"We must expect next year still heavier U-boat attacks against us and we are making extensive preparations," he said.

Thinking Ahead For Campaign

The government, Churchill said, is thinking ahead to 1943 and 1944 and is planning for tonnage which must be sent overseas.

He announced that so far 14,000 civilians have been killed and 20,000 wounded seriously—about four-fifths of them in London—by German air. About 300 soldiers have been killed and 500 wounded, the prime minister said.

Churchill appeared confident. He warned again against regarding the danger of invasion as past or not likely to return and suggested that the British watchword for the winter should be:

"It's a grand life if we don't weaken."

"The bearing of the British people has gained the untold admiration of all classes in the British Empire and the United States," he said.

He admitted that air raid warnings had retarded aircraft production.

DIVISION OF ITALIAN ARMY IS ENCIRCLED

front high pass, the Greek army moved to the south and the sea mountains to the north. If the Greeks succeed in capturing this pass they will be able to swing their advance on Koritsa from the northeast, still following the main road. Greek planes early today bombed the Koritsa area and Italian troop concentrations on the main Balkan-Koritsa road.

LIGHTNING DASHES

Greek shock troops were reported to have formed columns six miles or so of Koritsa, and according to reports the entire division of 17,000 Italians was threatened with isolation.

Greek motorcycle troops acted swiftly by making lightning dashes into the town held by the Italian division and cutting communications.

According to reports, the Italian division, which had led the Italian army from the north, was in the Florina-Koritsa sector, was now trying to fight its way back in the area between the Balkan-Koritsa road, commanded by the Greek army.

Greek troops led by the famous Evinos regiment of aikirois advanced into the town, and gained additional dominant heights on the Albanian side of the border, and to have taken numerous prisoners. The Greeks were said to be forcing their way into the town as they captured them.

Unidentified reports persisted of Albanian uprisings against the Italians. Some rebel groups were reported to have taken up arms.

The Italian division was reported to have been reinforced, including many tanks, to Albania.

Five Italian planes were also seen yesterday in the area, and were reported to be bombing a machine gunning position. The enemy column all along the front.

Where Greeks And Italians Fight

Italian troops claim to have forced the Greek border (1) on the line to Salonika and in the Epirus region (2). The Greek high command has announced that the Italian forces were attacking hard the Epirus region but did not confirm Italian claims of advances. Reports from Greece indicate that British forces have not acted Corfu (3), as reported several times and are unlikely to occupy the island because of its vulnerability from Italian air attacks.

Close Contest Is Expected Today In U.S. Elections

RIGHT TO VOTE IS SAFEGUARD OF DEMOCRACY

Roosevelt Makes Address On Election Eve From New York Home

HYDE PARK, N.Y., Nov. 4 (AP)—To a country which has the sun light and star light of peace, President Roosevelt declared last night that the right of the people to choose their own officers of government provides for them "the most powerful safeguard of our democracy."

He spoke in an election eve broadcast from his country home. "After the ballots are counted," Mr. Roosevelt told the countrymen of the United States of America will be decided.

There is every indication, he said, that the number of votes cast will be far greater than in any previous election.

PROOF OF VITALITY
That is the proof of proof he needed—of the vitality of our democracy," he asserted.

Mr. Roosevelt spoke from the study of his home overlooking the Hudson river, looking down at the city.

In the statement issued before he went to bed, the president said that the election would be a "test of the vitality of our democracy," and that the results would be a "test of the vitality of our democracy."

He compared it to what he said was "the last-minute effort" to secure the election, as he said, "the vitality of our democracy."

CONTRASTS LIVES
Then, later on, in the quiet of his Hyde Park study, he contrasted the lives of free Americans with those of those who had "gone to the land" abroad because of their homes "bombs of destruction" were dropping on them as they went.

"As I sit here tonight with my own family," he said, "I think of all the other American families—millions of families all through the land—sitting in their own homes."

They have to sleep in peace, he said, "they will be able to sleep in peace, free to say and do what they wish, free to worship as they please."

"Tomorrow of all days they will be free to choose their own officers of government," he said, "they will be free to choose their own officers of government."

ASKS FOR GUIDANCE
I think I speak the minds of all of you when I say that we thank God that we live in the sunlight and freedom of peace—free from war and that we propose and expect to continue to live our lives in peace—free from war and that we propose and expect to continue to live our lives in peace."

He concluded his radio address by reading to his listeners an old prayer asking the guidance of God for the nation.

Shortly before returning to Hyde Park for the broadcast, the president, in his final appearance before today's balloting, spoke briefly in a radio address.

He said he was calling on his Hudson Valley neighbors for the last time as a candidate for office.

From a platform on the city's finest street, he spoke of the past and the present and the future, and the "need that all of us have to think day and night in terms of our own future form of government."

It is true, as we all know," Mr. Roosevelt declared, "that in many other parts of the world serious and sometimes successful attacks have been made on it."

"Free forms of government, based on theory of might rather than the theory of right, have been attacked and have been defeated," he said.

But in the long run, he said, the Italian people, with their proud heritage of freedom, have been left with the rest of the world, to set government based on free elections.

Power in the United States, the president said, may be used for the country's recognized ability to defend itself.

showed himself to 12,000,000 people, he spoke anywhere and everywhere he could get half a dozen or many thousands of people to listen. He forced himself into a position where many other observers believe he can win.

STAND ON PREDICTIONS
The campaign managers stood upon their previous predictions. Edward Flynn, Democratic national chairman, called for 427 electoral votes out of 531 for the president; Joseph Martin, Republican, predicted 224 for Mr. Roosevelt. Polls sampling public opinion came up with predictions of a closer popular vote and many states in doubt.

In addition to a president and vice-president, Republicans will choose one-third of the Senate and an entire House of Representatives at Washington; as well as holders of many state and federal offices of various periods, including 24 governors.

The long-range presidential campaign, which has been going on over the third-term issue has obscured the personalities of those who will be far the greatest in American history.

But one triumvirate came in for much attention. They are the people Mr. Roosevelt, Mr. Charles McNary, and Mr. Wendell L. Willkie.

Mr. McNary, Republican, is a "Martin, Barlow and Flah" type. Three Republican members of the last House of Representatives, Joseph Martin and Hamilton Flah are again in the running. Mr. McNary, a Republican, was elected to the Senate from New York State. The president-nominee, Mr. Roosevelt, has a record of defense measures and steps to aid farmers.

WOLKING RE-ELECTION
Wolkingmen analysts seeking re-election include Harry Johnson, the veteran Illinois Republican, and Arthur Vandenberg, Michigan Republican. ## LEWIS URGES ELECTION OF W. L. WILLKIE AS CAPITAL OF GREATER STATE

WASHINGTON, Nov. 5.—(AP)—John L. Lewis, chairman of the Congress of Industrial Organizations, once again urged the election of Wendell Willkie last night, declaring in a brief mid-night broadcast that the re-election of Franklin D. Roosevelt would result in a "British Empire" for the United States.

"Neither President Roosevelt, nor any spokesman for his administration," said Lewis, "has been in a position to explain the reasons for the charges he made in his first speech opposing the president's re-election. 'Their response' have been confined to violent personal criticism, abuse and slanderous charges."

"I assert again that the re-election of President Roosevelt would result in the nation's involvement in war," Lewis said.

"The citizens who vote for President Roosevelt are election tomorrow assume the hazard of our nation's involvement in war."

Electoral College Important Factor In American Voting

NEW YORK, Nov. 5.—(CP)—The voting machines do not think, nobody ever bothers to learn their names, but the persons for whom United States presidential ballots are really cast are the members of the Electoral College.

In some of the states they list these men and women—always being careful to include one Democrat or Republican on the ballots. But in most states they are literally the little men who are not there.

"They take for granted many of our democratic institutions," he said. "They forget that such institutions must be constantly guarded."

PROMISES PLACE
This was the second of three talks scheduled by the candidate for election, which he held in New York. He declared his every act as president would be designed to keep this country out of foreign wars, and to keep it at peace.

He had also declared that he would eliminate most of his prepared text because, he said, said, "I will not be a politician. I will be a man."

The passages declared by Willkie included the nomination of Wendell Willkie as president, and the nomination of Wendell Willkie as president, and the nomination of Wendell Willkie as president.

Text Of Premier Churchill's Speech

LONDON, Nov. 3.—(CP Cable).—Following is the text of Prime Minister Winston Churchill's speech today in the House of Commons.

Her Majesty declared on the 3rd of this, as we would not bend to his will, he would wipe out our cities. He has done it. He has given us the order to severely carry it within his power to carry it out.

However, the cities of Great Britain are still standing. They are quite distinctive objects on the landscape and our people are proud about their tasks with the utmost activity.

Fourteen thousand civilians have been killed and 20,000 wounded, nearly four-fifths of them in London. That has been the loss of life and limb. As against those, 300 soldiers have been killed and 500 wounded.

So much for the attack on military objectives. A great deal of house property has been destroyed or damaged, but nothing that cannot be covered by our insurance scheme.

VERY LITTLE DAMAGE

Very little damage has been done to our munitions and aircraft production, though a certain amount of time was lost through air raid warnings. This last time will have been made up in the time we are down to the new conditions. None of the services upon which the life of our great cities depends—water, fuel, electricity, gas, sewage—not has been broken.

On the contrary, although there must inevitably be local shortages, all the authorities concerned with these vital functions of the modern community have them on top of their jobs, feet it successfully as each work passes.

TRANSPORT DIFFICULTIES

Transport has been a greater difficulty, as may well be imagined when we think of the vast numbers who go in to our cities every day.

However, we are getting a good grip on this and I say with some confidence that we shall find other methods, possibly by many methods at the same time, the problems connected with transport will be solved in a manner tolerable to the great number of people who are affected.

Shelters are being multiplied. Improvements and preparations on an intensive scale are in progress for mitigating the inevitable severity of winter on those who sleep with the shelters. All this is going ahead.

UNFINISHED ADAPTATION

There is some unfinished work of adaptation on the part of our people not only in London but in Birmingham, Liverpool, Manchester and other great cities. But the unfinished adaptation of all classes throughout the country and the United States and so far they have been assisted by the fact that the war has been a long one.

At last we have the other side. I asked a group of stern-hearted men who stood around a dinner table what was the worst and deepest blow from the background said: "This is a grand life if we would not."

There is the British warship for the winter of 1940. We shall be something else for the winter of 1941.

There is no doubt the full measure of the power of the enemy and his bombing force have been employed against us. They have been employed against us. They have been employed against us. They have been employed against us.

shoulders, broad though they may be.

GIANT TASK

Moreover, we have been during the last month at the lowest point of our British strength. The threat of invasion always to be met and the great forces we are maintaining in the Mediterranean, in addition to those necessary to the protection of our innumerable convoys, have imposed upon the Royal Navy a gigantic task.

However, this period of strain is a period of preparation. The American destroyers are rapidly coming into service just when they are most needed and the main flow of new construction started at the outbreak of the war is now coming along.

In spite of serious losses, we have still nearly as much shipping tonnage as we had at the outbreak of the war, and a great deal of neutral shipping which, used to trade freely with us is now under our control. Moreover, our U-boat hunting is still having its success. Two more German U-boats have been sunk in the last two or three days on the western approaches.

One of them was the U-boat which sank the Empress of Britain.

NOT SO FRUITFUL

We have a number of their crews, who have been saved, as prisoners of war. On the other hand, when I speak of our shipping tonnage which will be appreciably diminished from the beginning of the war, it must be remembered that our shipping is not so fruitful as it was in previous years.

On the main elements of the war effort of the British Empire we must have a delay in the mobilizing of convoys and convoys at ports. It would not be wise to suppose that greater activity on the part of the British Empire will be brought about, although the great volume of shipping tonnage is practically undiminished. I used to say that, intense efforts will be made by the Admiralty.

My friend the First Lord gave the word of the Admiralty and I am confident that he is aided by the able efforts in the service.

INTENSE EFFORTS

Intense efforts are being made by the Admiralty and also by the Ministry of Shipping to cope with these difficulties, and having lived through it all, I am confident that the war and the last great experience, I am sure cannot doubt that they will be able to bring in all vital supplies of food and ammunition which we shall need.

The dangers in the air are sudden and might have become catastrophic had dangers to our shipping been more numerous. The dangers in the air are sudden and might have become catastrophic had dangers to our shipping been more numerous. The dangers in the air are sudden and might have become catastrophic had dangers to our shipping been more numerous.

We have had to look a long way ahead in this sphere of war. We have had to think of the winter of 1940 and 1941 and of the tonnage we shall be able to move and have to move across the sea.

Every endeavor must be made to use the time available to produce the greatest volume of food, which this fertile island is capable and able to produce. The movement of foodstuffs and other necessities for the movement of the enemy did not surrender to the enemy.

MAKE WAY THROUGH

Having dealt upon this sea, we must make way through the sea. We must make way through the sea. We must make way through the sea. We must make way through the sea.

Therefore I agree with those who think the invasion danger has for the time, been diminished. But do not let us make the mistake of assuming it has passed away or it may not recur in another form.

UNREMITTING VIGILANCE

What is it that carries invasion into an invasion? It is a maintenance in Britain of strong forces, preventing, vigilance by sea, air and land. A mighty army crouches across the Channel and the North Sea. Substantial masses of shipping are gathered in all harbors of the western seaboard of Europe, from North Cape to the Grande River. We must not allow our "shadow clefts" to lead us into thinking this is all a mere pretence, a manoeuvre to be seen here to prevent our redrawing of our forces.

The vital realities of our duties must be borne in upon our whole troops and home guard during the winter months. There must be no relaxation except when on necessary leave.

The plain fact that an invasion plan on a large scale has not been attempted in spite of the very great need of the enemy to destroy us in our island and all three or four months when we should have done while all the world wondered have passed safely away—the fact alone constitutes in itself one of the historic victories of the British Isles and as a monumental milestone in our forward march.

TRAINING STRONG ARMY

We are engaged in forming and training a very strong army and the fact is being done in Canada, Australia and India. We are now in the tenth month of the war and the British army of which I am now speaking in particular has been able to shape itself with precision.

Although the sea and air have been the main elements of the war effort of the British Empire we must have a delay in the mobilizing of convoys and convoys at ports.
